“Seán's a very technically competent software developer, more specifically he has a strong grasp of things at the data level. He's able to pick up and adapt high-level concepts like MVC, schema migration etc. etc. He's also great to work with one-on-one.”

Peggy Glitch

Director of Communications & Benefits

RIT Alumni Relations

“Sean has worked for me as a co-op student and part-time student employee. He is extremely intelligent and has great technical abilities. His job duties consist of web design and development, data security, e-communication to over 40,000 alumni, technical support, and training. I look forward to working with Sean this quarter on developing a Second Life presence for our office. In addition to being an honest employee, Sean is extremely dependable, responsible and interacts well with staff at all levels. I would highly recommend Sean for any position. He would be a great addition to any team.”

Megan Cheever

Associate Director

RIT Alumni Relations

“Sean was an absolute asset to our division of Alumni Relations at RIT. He worked to develop programming and design for our website. His technical skills far surpassed that of any other student I have worked with and his dedication to high quality work was remarkable. Sean always accomplished what was expected and more for our office. It was a true pleasure to work with Sean and I am confident that he will not only be a valuable employee but a great addition to any staff.”

Tyler Carey

Director of Sales

Harris Connect, Inc.

“Sean Hayes was a student worker in the Alumni Relations office at RIT, when I had the pleasure of working with him. I was in Client Relations at Harris Connect at the time, providing online services to the Alumni office. Sean's demeanor and performance were always well beyond those of a student worker, and I had actually assumed that he was an associate director or comparable staffer before finding out his actual age and role. He is a consummate professional, keen to understand and improve products, and I expect great things from him within the technology and advancement worlds, having already proven himself before even graduating from college.”

“Sean was president of SIFE in 2007-2008. Sean has used this experience to advise me on how to run the Game Developers Club. Sean also comes to our project leads meetings and provides additional help when needed. Sean is not only a good friend, but he is great mentor.”
